

16 Days of Activism

Westmorland and Furness
Safeguarding Children
Partnership

Useful Links

Domestic abuse | Westmorland and Furness Safeguarding Children Partnership
UN Women 16 Days – IDAS World Associate for Girl Guides and Girl Scouts

Reflection & Next Steps

Digital violence shows how online spaces can mirror real-world harm. Reflect on how we interact online, what risks exist, and who might be vulnerable.

Next steps: report abuse when you see it, support survivors, raise awareness and advocate for stronger online protections. Small actions from each of us can make digital spaces safer for women and girls.

How to Take Action

Everyone can play a role:

- Educate yourself and others about digital risks.
- Report online abuse to platforms and authorities.
- Support survivors of cyberbullying, doxxing, or data leaks.
- Advocate for stronger laws and accountability for tech companies.
- Challenge harmful online spaces that normalise violence.

Even small actions—like sharing awareness or speaking out—make a difference.

Objectives of This Year's Campaign

The 2025 campaign aims to:

- Raise awareness about the rising threat of online violence.
- Mobilise communities to take action against digital abuse.
- Encourage tech companies and governments to implement stronger protections.
- Support survivors and promote accountability for perpetrators.
- The focus is clear: online safety is a human rights issue.

Why Digital Violence Persists

Women with public visibility—activists, journalists, young women and politicians—are disproportionately targeted. The risk is higher for those facing discrimination, such as race, disability, gender identity, or sexual orientation.

Stopping digital abuse is challenging because of weak regulations, lack of legal recognition in many countries, limited accountability from tech platforms and the anonymity of perpetrators. AI and social networks amplify harmful content, while spaces like misogynistic forums normalise violence. Cross-border abuse and limited support for survivors further complicate prevention and justice.

Introduction to the 16 Days of Activism

Every day, 137 women are killed by a family member worldwide. Gender-based violence affects millions of women and girls, cutting across all cultures, societies, and economic backgrounds. The 16 Days of Activism Against Gender-Based Violence is an annual global campaign to raise awareness, advocate for change and promote a world free from violence. This year it runs from 25th November 2025, the International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women, to 10th December 2025, Human Rights Day.

Background and History

The campaign began in 1991, led by the Centre for Women's Global Leadership. It links violence against women to human rights, emphasising that such violence is not only a social issue but a violation of fundamental rights. Over the years, the campaign has grown internationally, with governments, Non-Governmental Organisations (NGOs), universities and activists taking part, creating a global movement that calls for prevention, accountability and support for survivors.

Key Themes

Each year has a specific theme to focus global attention on key issues. The theme for the 2025 "16 Days of Activism against Gender-Based Violence" campaign is "Digital Violence Against Women," focusing on preventing and responding to online abuse, creating safer online spaces and raising awareness of digital safety. The campaign calls for governments, technology companies and other entities to implement and fund comprehensive measures to address digital gender-based violence.

Digital abuse uses online tools to harass, stalk, or harm women and girls. Examples include: non-consensual sharing of intimate images, cyberbullying, online sexual harassment, AI-generated images / fake content, hate speech, doxxing (publishing private information without consent), online stalking, grooming, catfishing, and misogynistic networks. These online harms often lead to offline violence, including coercion, physical abuse, or even femicide, with long-lasting effects.